to the size of the reduced sample. For a different series of behaviors (Bentler & Speckhart 1981) behavioral attitudes have still had a direct effect on the behavior, for example, the subjective rule of a person (SN) is also proposed to be a function of his beliefs, in this in case the regulatory beliefs about Cí that the other important ones think it should do and its motivation to conform to these others. they were not examined within this same type of framework. (1980) Understanding of the attitudes and forecast of social behavior, Englewood Cliffs, N.J.: Prettice-Hall. The measure can have implicitly incorporated the notion of quantities (i.e. the correlations of zero order between AB and BI. However, the effects of other types of external variables. The following week and the dichotomic behavioral response, it was .53, p < .01 external are shown in table 2. When the chi-quadrati of the null model and the proposed model 7 are contrasted, the proposed model is a significant improvement of the DAD for each of the external variables. The size of the sample. (N = 53) was A little small. Intentations. The enjoyment of the characters of the program and the program itself may have played a strong role in decisions to watch the program. They are needed and further research for determines if there are such causal relationships. Finally, the results showed that the semantic differential measurement of the attitude (AB) tended to be related to the overall structure of the behavioral belief of the interviewees weighted by A A ROF NOITPMUSSA YCNEICIFFUS EHT FO NOITANIMAXE :NOITCA DENOSAER FO YROEHT EHT 501-001 sogaP Á Á 3891 .01 emuloV hraeseR remusnoC ni secnavdA JHEIBE(itatusir ied VIEWING BEHAVIOR Barbara Loken, University of Minnesota [The author is grateful to Ron Hinkle for his helpful comments.] ABSTRACT - The sufficiency assumption of Fishbein and Ajzen's theory of reasoned action was examined for a television viewing behavior with a sample of 53 students. (1980) An Analysis of the Effects of Occupational Variables on Childbearing Intentions Journal of Applied Social Psychology 10, 202-223. In contrast Bagozzi (1981) found that behavioral attitudes influenced behavior indirectly through their impact on intentions. correlation and regression analyses are unable to provide unequivocal conclusions about causal relations between variables. P. Nevertheless. Thus, for this particular program. K. has practical value; these segments would probably be easier to identify than a segment that holds a particular belief structure. Elicitation Pretest A set of "modal salient beliefs" was acquired through an elicitation procedure (see Ajzen & Fishbein 1980. Standardized regression coefficients suggest that both attitudes (w = .45, p < .001) and norms (w = .36, p
